And What a Glorious Day it Was 210 Years Ago

Description

Oct 22, 1797... The modern parachute is born as Andre-Jacques Garnerin makes the 1st human parachute descent from the air. Garnerin jumps from a hydrogen balloon at a height of 2,300 feet in Paris.

Hmmmmm....the development of a safety system for inherently dangerous modes of travel that defy gravity.

Now, just look at how it's no longer the domain of surplus C-9 28? canopies modified by a few brave and adventurous souls with hot knifes, but an industry of it's own.

Category

- 1. History
- 2. Skydiving
- 3. Technology

Date CreatedOctober 22, 2007 Authoradmin

